

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Magellan's Law releases *qd documents*TM Professional Discovery Edition

San Antonio, TX - July 17, 2009 - Magellan's Law Corporation has announced qd documentsTM Professional Discovery Edition, a tool for handling litigation discovery materials, including coded databases, text, images, transcripts and electronic documents.

The application is aimed at novice users, featuring an entry-level price, familiar notebook-style interface and simplified administrative tools.

"There's a hole in the marketplace that we're trying to fill," said Magellan's Law co-founder Jane Gennarelli. "There are plenty of tools for lawyers who want to manage documents in mega-cases, but lawyers working on small and mid-sized cases are neglected. They have to choose between tools at the low end that are little better than spreadsheets and software at the other extreme that's both complicated and expensive."

"We think we've hit the right balance -- we offer powerful functionality, but we've made it simple enough that it doesn't require technical staff just to create a new database. We see it as a great fit in small and mid-sized firms that need an easy-to-manage and easy-to-learn tool for handling their litigation. Of course, it can also fit into large firms -- for litigation teams that handle smaller cases and sometimes don't get hands-on attention from the litigation support staff."

The qd documents application can be used standalone or by a team of lawyers and paralegals. For workgroup use, it can be shared peer-to-peer, or it can be installed on a server with both network and internet access. In addition, Magellan's Law can host the application for its clients.

The qd documents software is cross-platform, too. "We see more and more young lawyers using Macs," Gennarelli explained, "so we've designed the system so that Macs and Windows users can work together in the same database and share their work."

qd documents Professional Discovery Edition is available now from Magellan's Law Corporation.
